Competition Law Course Content

Who should attend?

This course is available as an open or private course.

This course applies to any person who is undertaking selling, marketing, purchasing, commercial contracting, or simply networking on behalf of the company in any environment, in or out of hours.

This should be considered a statutory course, to demonstrate the culture of compliance at all times.

Recommended to repeat at intervals, to ensure complete understanding, and to protect the business against what could become an existential threat if significant fines are imposed from breaches.

Running this as a closed course within your company can provide the opportunity to discuss internal matters in a confidential environment.

In these rapidly changing times, businesses who continue to do business in ignorance of the Competition Act, risk penalties of up to 10% of global turnover.

It is essential to upskill your board, your sales and commercial teams, and your purchasing team, in order to assess risk, recognise process, avoid pitfalls, and protect both the business but also the individual directors

This vital discipline is essential for business leaders at all levels who are involved with selling, buying, or contracting.

The skills learned will provide the basis to understand:

- What is the Competition Act
- Introduction to Competition Law in the UK
- Evolution of the various Acts
- The Relevant Sections
- The Regulatory Bodies and their Powers
- The Penalties
- Scenarios
- Case studies of breaches within recent times
- Behaviours and Culture
- Policies in place
- Disclosure
- Your Role
- What next

It is possible to video record this course, in order to repeat internally, at will, for new starters, refresher courses, and to demonstrate the culture of the company, much akin to health and safety.

A video license is available on request for an additional fee

Investment is £395 per person, on an open course – dates are available every month, subject to interest

Investment is £1,850 for up to 10 attendees for a closed private course, held within your company.
